HORRORS OF THE LONDON BURIAL GROUNDS

The following diabolical transactions was committed in the of St. Clement's Danes, in the burial ground of Portugal Street coln's-Inn Fields, where the remains of the immortal Joe Mi interred, but which have, no doubt, long since shared the fate. The detestible doings of which we shall speak are as have been committed with the knowledge and under the orders Fitch, the Sexton for sixteen years, and his man Watkins. T ment is put forth by William Chamberlain, the second grave who resides at No. 1, Wild Street, Lincoln's-Inn, and who recently published document ;—

‘ The man, Watkins, helped me to list up pieces of bodi tered) on the pickaxe. On a Sunday morning, Watkins an in the Portugal Street, Burial-ground, have made the neigh ring again with the noise of the breaking up of the sound c have had as many as twenty or thirty people round the raili Edwards, the bell-ringer, burnt nothing but coffin-wood su winter. I can name the man who has had coffin-wood bro from the vaults of St. Clements, to burn in his own house an who has carried it to that person's own house. The people in the houses in Clements-lane, looking over the burial-ground, hundreds of times cried shame on our doings. I also know that ~~it~~ has been made, with an oath, to run up a wall to prevent the seeing the chopping up. I have seen a cart load of coffin-wood lying on the ground. I have often said that I could not get ~~it~~ and have been told somebody else must. I commenced work-er in the year 1831, and continued till the year 1836. I had ~~one~~ a vault in the green ground, Portugal Street, to bury another; I had one foot in the coffin in the vault, and the other on ~~the~~ trace; a gush like a puff of wind came from the coffin under ~~it~~ I felt my power leave me; and one of the mourners gave me ~~me~~ in to get some drink. From that time I have never been well, know a cripple, as I have stated in my evidence before the Committee of the House of Commons.'

, ower, shuddering humanity should doubt this statement, ~~join~~ an extract from this evidence, as SWORN to in the House mns.

orked between five and six years before I was taken ill; I was ~~kn~~; I got up one Sunday morning and ~~went~~ into the ground ~~ng~~ Street; we had a grave to open; I believe it was ten feet; ~~and~~ completed the work, and I cut four or five coffins through ~~piece~~ of ground, and the bodies of some; I placed the flesh ~~ad~~ I went home to my breakfast: it was our church time; ~~nt~~ dare do any more till the people were in church, for the cutting away the wood was so terrible that mobs used to be ~~erailings~~ and looking! we could not throw a piece of wood or ~~o~~ a body up without being seen; the people actually cried, ~~out~~ of the windows at the backs of the houses on account of ~~l~~ not you find it hard work to cut through a solid coffin? ~~ard~~; I have been an hour and a half or two hours over them, ~~the~~ lead and taking the sides of the coffins up, and I have spoken to the head grave-digger about it, and said, 'We shall get this grave done on account of this wood; the wood is so hard that you cannot move it: not even the cloth hardly soiled, or the rusted.' 'How many coffins have you dug through, and bodies through, to get a depth of ten feet?' 'To get ten feet of ground must cut through at least five or six, in the almshouses I could cover, at least, and expose a dozen of coffins within one hour. Do you feel a degree of compunction when you first began to work through those bodies which had just been interred?' 'Yes; I felt timid and a great dread of doing so; but having nothing else to do, did not know what to do.' 'Under whose orders did you do it?' 'Fitch and Mr. Watkins's orders.' Mr. Fitch is the sexton, and Mr. Watkins is the man that employed me first; I have heard Mr. Watkins say to Mr. Fitch, 'Sir,' says he, 'What shall we do with this wood?' I have heard him swear, and say, 'You must do it; you must move this wood away!' 'Do you repeat the statement, that it is impossible for you to make a grave in that grave-yard now without cutting through the bodies?' 'Without cutting through the bodies, and many of them perfectly fresh, you cannot get even three feet of grave, nor yet five feet.' 'How near is the wood of the coffins to the surface?' 'There are coffins now within a foot of the surface.' 'What do you mean by doing this with them?' 'Breaking the coffins up, and cutting the flesh in pieces before burying it.' 'This is done with the perfect cognizance and approbation of the sexton?' 'Yes!' 'In fact, by his order and instruction?' 'Yes; I have heard him order it—there are instruments kept for the purpose of cutting away coffins, a chopper and a saw; there is a chopper for them in regard of digging a grave in the middle of the ground.' 'Do you suppose that there is no place in that burial-ground in which it would be possible to find a place where three feet of depth could be given to a body about to be interred, without interfering with other coffins?' 'There is not, except it is in family graves.' 'Do you date your work from 1836?' 'From 1836; I have never been free from pain since then.'

tine. ‘ After you were first taken ill and sent to the hospital, you, upon your recovery, return to this occupation?’ No! I was sick of it; they would have been glad for me to have come, because said there was not a better grave-digger in London than I was, for digging and getting the things according to order. ‘ But with all they said to you, you still refused, because you felt that your illness was the consequence of your occupation, and that if you returned to your occupation you would be probably ill again?’ I may say it would have caused my death if I had kept on with it. ‘ After you are positively ill, so ill as not to be able to work, had you any pains gradually coming on?’ It first came on in my feet.—when did it come on? ‘ Violent pain through the dampness of the ground, in my knees from kneeling on the wet coffins; open coffins, which were then full of water and pieces of flesh; and we have had to bucket out water and pieces of flesh, and we made holes in the ground and bailed it out. Do you not think the illness in your knees might be consequent upon the wet of the damp coffins and not the effluvia?’ That is partly the occasion of it. Your wife is now afflicted with some complaint that you have?’ Yes; the doctors told one another they termed this complaint to be catching. ‘ Does the sexton receive any emolument from the interment?’ Yes. ‘ Do you know what those emoluments are?’ In the first place he received his own wages upon each interment; then again he stops 6d. out of the first digging, and then he stops 6d. out of each foot after the first digging. The regular money is 18d. a foot, and he gives 6d., and that allows him to have a gravedigger 1s., and I never received myself more than 4d. after the first digging. ‘ You were second gravedigger?’ Yes. ‘ That was why you received 4d.?’ That is why I only received it, because it was ordered by the churchwardens. ‘ It is, then, a fact that the sexton is interested in the burying of as many bodies as possible in the churchyard?’ Yes, he is; the more bodies he can bury, the more it is to his profit. ‘ Is it or is it not the duty of the sexton to communicate to the churchwardens as to what is the state of burial-ground?' Yes, it is his duty to do so. ' Do you believe sexon was in the habit of doing so?' I cannot say that he was in habit of doing so ; I know that there have been many still-borns that like, which has never been entered upon the books, and who has buried, and received the money for them. ' Have they buried with the Church service performed over them?' No still-borns have not ; they have been put in after the mourners gone, in other funerals ; they have been put in on the tops of coffins, and at the heads and feet.

What man who has lost a pure sister, a spotless daughter, or a wife would like to see her thus torn, as if by a Persian Ghon, the sanctuary of the grave, her limbs exposed to an execrating, and then, having been hewed into pits poured from a bucket water into a hole! It is degrading alike to religion and all sense and we might suspect the testimony to be highly coloured. But it is supported by the evidence of indifferent persons, resident in immediate neighbourhood of the burial ground, it looks somewhat like corroborative proof. Mr. J. M. Lane, cane-worker, supplies the following :—

' What is the mode of interment practised ?—Digging a grave at times, and then a few weeks afterwards they will go at it. There was one occasion when my wife noticed it more than any time ; there was a corpse buried on a Sunday, from the hospital, and there were two females following it ; what made us take particular notice of it was, that they came from the hospital, and went out at the same time across the ground towards Clare Market, and then came back to the hospital. In the course of a month afterwards they opened his grave again, and when they opened it they brought the coffin in pieces, not split, but the sides were taken from the head and the board ; they brought it up without splitting, just as you might break a case to pieces, or the lid off a box. After they had brought nd laid it on the ground, they brought up the bones with the hanging in tatters upon it, then about four shovels of soft sub-came up, and my wife called to the person in the next room ness the thing; they called out to the men; the men made them over, but turned their backs towards the houses to try to avoid ple seeing it, but the window being high, we could see every-that came out of the grave; they were not far off. At another a body was brought out of King's College Hospital, and it was own without any service over it. I do not know what was the of that.—Chairman: have you in the early part of the morning, a knocking in the church-yard? Yes, — What did you attribute to it? I know what it was. What was it? They were destroy-e coffins. — In the morning they destroy, tho', coffins? Before the, I have looked, and I have seen them at work, with handcuffs tied over their noses and mouths; — Breaking in; coffins? will be a good illustration of what I mean. — ON CHAPEL, — This building is situated about midway upon the inside of Clement's Lane, Strand, — Mr. Samuel Pitt's Evidence.

Will you state to the Committee generally the state of the interin the cemetery of that chapel? At the time I attended it, was from the year 1823, for six or seven years, there were in-ts, and the place was in a very filthy state; the smell was most able and very injurious.

What number of dead bodies are there in this place? I should ten or twelve thousand! In a space of 50 or 60 feet by 40?
Your statement is, that in the space of 59 feet by 29, they ried as many as 12,000 bodies? From what I have understood, many have been removed, to make room for others; I did it came through a woman who used to wash for Mrs. Howse, y used to burn the coffins under the copper, and frequently in n fire-place.
